*“Half remembered frost
Washed from black beach at low tide
Flying islands rise”*

Haiku by Alistair Gentry

A fragment from distant planets segmented in two parts intersects an archetypal plane conveying a cosmic sense of transformation. Stone and metal combined create functional sculptures, unique in their essence, simulating otherworldly landscapes.

Materials: console made of calendered metal structure in bronze finishing with manganese salt treatment. Natural stone elements fixed to the structure to choose from: Obsidian, raw Labradorite, raw Amethyst, Lapis Lazuli.

**Being elements selected from natural environment, dimensions and weight could be different on each piece.*
